YES, WE ARE CONCERNED...

We are concerned local residents and we worry about potential negative impacts of the Rhodena Wind Farm project. We are pro green renewable energy, but wind energy is not without its costs. Building it close to our community could negatively affect the well-being of people living here.

Building wind farms requires the permanent alteration of wildlife habitat, recreational area and viewsapes. Their road systems, construction, maintenance and retirement all have an environmental cost. We are concerned that homeowners could potentially observe health issues through noise and light flickering. Of equal concern is the stress and anxiety caused by having your traditional rural landscape and way of life permanently altered by industrial structures.

We worry that property owners could face a decrease in property values to the point of properties being completely unsellable. The wind towers will be constructed in a minimum distance of 1.5 km from residential homes and directly adjacent to many private properties. Property boundaries are in some cases not more than a few hundred meters from wind towers, which makes it impossible for landowners to make development plans on their private land without significant negative impacts.

There are numerous complaints and law suits from affected people in Canada and around the World. Many of these people suffer ongoing health issues due to Wind Farms, in some cases forcing them to abandon their homes. Do you want this in your community?

As said before, wind energy is not without its costs. Such costs need to be carefully weighed against the social, environmental and economic realities of individual projects and circumstances. What might work somewhere, may not work somewhere else!
